SUFFRAGETTES IN EUROPE ARE AS MILITANT AS EVER

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Matters of universal interest, such as the Balkan war and others of sudden and startling appeal as Wednesday's and Thursday's scenes in the House of Commons are always apt temporarily to hide away the movements of slower growth. As far as the notice taken by the press is concerned the suffragists might be imagined to have retired from the arena. But to imagine this would be a great mistake. They have never been more active and have never worked and organized harder than in the last few weeks. There have been no organized orgies such as window smashing and other outrages, but the militants all over the kingdom are keeping their hands in. At a big mass meeting in Victoria Park on Sunday, which had been practically unnoticed by the press, Mrs. Drummond, one of the chief militant leaders, advocated violence with utmost energy.

"Destruction of property will be a particular 'job' in the future," she declared, and the great crowd was with her.

During the past week in all parts of the kingdom, especially in London, Birmingham and Dublin, the militants have pursued a relentless campaign against the Post Office. Street post boxes by the score have been filled with varnish and some sticky black fluid, which rendered hundreds of envelopes illegible, and has given the General Post Office endless trouble in deciphering the others.

John Burns, the president of the Local Government Board, at a non-political meeting in his own constituency in Battersea, was practically unable to get a hearing and had to suspend the proceedings for twenty minutes while he personally superintended the police who were throwing out men and women suffragists. Even then he could not carry on the opening ceremony of a harmless flower show.

George Lansbury, a prominent labor member of Parliament, has resigned his seat in the House and will contest for election from the Bow and Bromley division in order to fight in the constituency as a pure suffragist candidate.

A glance at the current number of Suffragette shows a collection is being made of £250,000, and the fund now totals £137,000, while the local reports, never noticed in the daily press, show that enthusiastic meetings are held daily all over the country. At all these meetings funds big and small come in.

Last Sunday's meeting of nonmilitant suffragists at Albert Hall brought together an enthusiastic assembly of more than 1,000 persons and more than $25,000 were collected on the spot. Mrs. Garrett, a suffragist fighter for more than twenty years, presided, and Lord Robert Cecil made a strong and impassioned speech, but no London paper gave more than a few lines to the meeting and some did not notice it at all, though sporadic window breaking on a small scale which occurred on the same day secured a fair amount of publicity, a fact which the militants have been using since to justify their policy of violence.

It must not be thought that because the suffragists, militant and law abiding, recently did not secure much public notice that they have ceased from making trouble. It will be strange if the militants do not break out again soon.

The Pankhurst organ, Suffragette, this week has for its front page an editorial excerpt from Patrick Henry's famous declaration, "Give me liberty or give me death!" The passage starts with the words, "Shall we try argument."

The reports of the Royal Commission on divorce, although duly noticed by the editorials in the newspapers, has not yet received real attention from the general public. G. K. Chesterton, whose opinion on all matters of general public interest is eagerly sought, says: "When I was a boy the only freedom the moderns seemed to fancy was suicide or the failure of life. The moderns have brightened up a bit. Their idea of freedom now is only divorce or the failure of love. That success is rather more free than failure and ten thousand times more common they cannot grasp yet. For the present I am against Government meddling in these long moral issues at all. I do not think a frankly heathen State ought to forbid divorce or suicide, but the whole Christian populace will permanently resist both and will continue to do so till you literally make them slaves."

The West End Baccarat Club has again started operations for the winter season. Scotland Yard is again debating what it can do with the young son of a peer who within the last week lost 40,000 pounds sterling. There is a new development in these clubs, which affords safety from any police raids. Certain West End clubs, hitherto above suspicion, are allowing their members to engage private rooms where baccarat is played for as high stakes as ever before in London.

TICKLES SOLES OF WIFE TO MAKE HER MAD; SUCCEEDS

William Amos White, a wood turner of 909 McAllister street, San Francisco, has been in the habit of tickling the soles of his wife's feet at night to see how mad she would get, according to the divorce complaint of Jane H. White, filed in the county clerk's office this morning. Because of the tickling, Mrs. White says that she has rarely been able to get a good night's sleep and, as a consequence, has become a nervous wreck.

WANTS BACTERIOLOGIST APPOINTED FOR HAWAII

HILO, Dec. 3.—Dr. J. S. B. Pratt, president of the Territorial Board of Health, arriving here last Friday, is making a complete tour of the Big Island on a thorough inspection of health conditions, which he will use as the basis for a number of recommendations in his report to the coming legislature.

His work already has proceeded far enough to enable him to announce one of these recommendations; that is, that a bacteriologist be appointed for this island. He favors a bacteriologist for each one of the larger islands, but thinks Hawaii especially is in need of a specialist of this kind because the work is rapidly becoming too heavy for Inspector D. S. Bowman to handle alone.

During his tour Dr. Pratt will inspect the rat laboratory established at Hamakua since his last visit to that place, and at Kona he will investigate the matter of the proposed new hospital at Kona-Waena. He expects to return to Honolulu the latter part of the present week.

 Coffee to Postum.

The large army of persons who have found relief from many chronic ailments by changing from coffee to Postum as a daily beverage, is growing each day.

It is only a simple question of trying it for oneself in order to know the joy of returning health as realized by a young lady, who writes:

"I had been a coffee drinker nearly all my life and it affected my stomach—caused insomnia—and I was seldom without a headache. I had heard about Postum and how beneficial it was, so concluded to stop drinking coffee and try it.

"I was delighted with the change. I can now sleep well and seldom ever have a headache. My stomach has gotten strong and I can eat without suffering afterwards. My whole system has been greatly benefited by Postum.

"My brother also suffered from stomach trouble while he drank coffee, but now, since using Postum, he feels so much better that he would not go back to coffee for anything."
